

ROOM FOR GROWTH

The project is a resource center for formally incarcerated people returning to civil society. Many transitional facilities are overrun with the great flux of people reentering society every year. Room for Growth project proposes to stabilize this group of people by offering another option of counseling centers, housing and work training facilities in the Washington Park neighborhood of Chicago. The primary organizational element is the support infrastructure of the Green Line, which is the datum for the proposed development. From this transportation route under the L tracks extends 23 acres of urban farms of the Room for Growth Development.
